A Judicial Question for Solomon The controversy which broke out on the departure of the redoubtable John C. Heenan for England, between several women as to their marital rights to the said Benicia Boy, and which arose on the exclusive conjugal claim which Adah Isaacs Menken, a dramatic daughter of Israel, set up to the man of muscle, and which was complicated by the equally exclusive claim set up by another deeply injured, or deeply infatuated lady, has at length been settled by the formal denial of the said John C. Heenan, through his next friend. George Wilkes, that he was ever married to any woman, much less to several

We say settled; but people will have their own ideas about it, and some may think that this denial complicates the matter still more. It was a strange hallucination for the fair Adah Isanes Menken. It is true, persons have imagined themselves to be teapots, pump-handles, and various other utensils; therefore, perhaps, charity should allow that such a matrimonial hallucination is possible to a woman, though the consequences to society if it should become generally subject to such hallucinations, cannot be contemplated, without concern.

Undoubtedly the spirited Adah is an ad mirer of muscle-men. This was always a marked feature of her race. During the palmy days of their power their rulers were selected for their superior size and muscle. Moses, Sampson, Saul and David, all demonstrated their pluck and muscular power. The honors which the daughters of Israel paid to David when he returned from his mill with the Philistine glant, show the spirit of the Hebrew women; and Adah, perhaps, remembers that the victor was rewarded with the daughter of the King for a wife, and therefore considers herself rightfully at the service of the Greeco-American Champion.

Perhaps, also, Adah's enthusiastic admiration for the Benicis stripling, when he went like the Champion of Israel, armed only with slings and his two bunches of fives, to meet the British Goliah, impressed her with the idea that they were one in spiritual affinity. Or it is possible that she may have felt, as young persons say sometimes though they always bitterly repent it, in the romances, when secret vows are trusted in anticipation of the ceremony of the church, that they were "married in the sight of heaven.'

It seems, however, that the Benicia Boy felt none of this passional affinity; perhaps because his mind was too much

On hospitable thoughts intent, toward the terrible Savers, in whose em bruce, as in that of the enthusiastic Adab, he might say with James Fitz James,

"No maiden's arms were round him thrown."
We fear that Benicia's denial is technical and does not cover the whole ground. It is true that considerable latitude was allowed to strong men in ancient times, and that Sampson would hardly be regarded as an ornament to our daily prayer-meetings; but although the Scriptures are good for doctrine, for reproof and for consolation, these examples can not be imitated now without incurring the reprobation of society, as the Benicia Boy will find.

The counter claim of the other Mrs. John C. Heenan makes the matter more inexplicable. We are not well enough versed in the modern improvements in the affections to know whether various affinities can exist for the same affection. It used to be held that but one disease could exist in the system at a time. It is possible that these diverse claims may be the coming of that time foretold in the Scriptures, when "Seven women shall lay hold on one man, saying we will eat our own bread and wear our own apparel, only let us be called by thy name to take away our reproach"—terms which, at this time, would vastly mitigate the apprehen-sions of matrimony in our young men, and on which, with one at a time, most of them would be glad to compromise. We commend this prophecy to our cotemporary, the Gazette, whose want of faith has led to serious apprehensions that the cost of matrimony will soon be so great that young men will not be able to marry, and so the world will come to an untimely end.

Atlantic Monthly.

The July number of this magazine has been received from the publishers. The Atlantic is working out a problem, somewhat interesting, inasmuch as all previous trials have failed, whether a literary magazine with original matter secured from the best talent in the country by paying for it, can be sustained in America.

The articles in this number are "Meteorology," "Treasure-Trove," "A Legend of Maryland," "Hunting a Pass," "The Cattle to the Poet," "More Words About Shelley, Clarians Picture," "Spring," "Ruft Choate,""The Regicide Colonels in England,"
"To the Cat-Bird," "The Professor's Story," "On the Formation of Galleries of Art, "Darwin on the Origin of Species," "Vanity," "Reviews and Literary Notices," "Recent American Publications."

In the debate in the Seaste on the appro-printion of $100 each, for a year a support of the Africans taken from the captured slaver, and to be returned to Africa, Senator Hammond said that from his own knowledge he could state that it weed not cost more than ten dollars a year to support a negro. Sen-ator Hammond is reputed to be a large slaveholder, and his knowledge is probably derived from plantation experience.

Justice in the Hamilton County Common Pleas Court

Most of our citizens will remember the indignation excited in our city by the brutal assault, about two years ago, on Mr. Van Mater, a gentleman of a blameless life, and much enfeebled by age and infirmities. Mr. Van Mater was going to his office early in the morning, when he saw an Irishman Michael Whitney, having another down in the gutter and beating him cruelly. Mr Van Mater expostulated with Whitney, when he turned upon him in the most savage manner, broke his ribs and beat him so that for several weeks his life was despaired of i was confined to his house for several months, and we understand has never entirely recovered. Whitney was not arrested till sometime afterward. He was convicted of assault with intent to kill, but was allowed a new trial. After long delay the case was disposed of on Tuesday by Judge Mallon. Whitney was allowed t and was sentenced by Judge Mallon to eigh days confinement in the dungeon. Really, life is held at a cheap rate in our Court of Common Pleas, or else the gratification of the brutality of the Michaels is held very precious. Probably for two days more in what is technically called "the dungeon, Whitney could have killed Mr. Van Mater outright. It will be gratifying, however, to the lovers of justice to know that on the same day Judge Mallon sentenced a woman who plead guilty to petit larceny, to six months' imprisonment. So society is still

Collision of Spiritual and Temporal Au

The New York City Inspector recently addressed a notification to Archbishop Hughes that the law providing for the registry of births, deaths and marriages, required every clergyman to report all marriages celebrated by him to the City Inspector, under a penalty of fifty dollars for refusing or neglecting so to do. The Archbishop, however replied by declining, "With the utmost respect for all human legal authority," to fulfill the simple requirements of that law. He says that many cases occur in which it is for the Catholic Priest to remedy privately the evils which the corruption of morals may have entailed.

The Archbishop also denies the authority of the State to inquire into the circumstances of an act which is not performed by its agent,

If the State appointed a salary for clergy If the State appointed a salary for clergy-men to perform marriage, or any other religi-ous act, as its official agent, I can under-stand that the State might have a right to inquire into the matter, time, circumstances, &c., of such act, and to hold its agent respon-sible to its laws. There may be those who will admit the obligation, in the absence of these conditions, to render the State an ac-count of their stewardship. But I beg leave to say, with the utmost respect for all human to say, with the utmost respect for all human legal authority, that I am not one of the number. I am prepared for a prison, or for a scaffold; but I am not prepared to obey a requisition which would violate the obligations of my conscience in a country like this. requisition which would violate the origi-tions of my conscience in a country like this, in which it is said that civil and religious liberty is the right of every citizen. Very respectfully, your obedient servant."

The Daily Press at the Watering Places Cincinnatians leaving the city for the watering places, will hardly derive the full benefit, either internal or external, from the waters, if deprived of the DAILY PRESS. The sudden breaking off of so healthy a habit as reading the Daily Press may cause a derangement or suppression of some of the delicate functions, either mental or physical, or both, which will require all the virtue of the waters, both internal and external to overcome. Thus remedial agencies will be exhausted in merely counteracting this privation, which should be directed to the recuperation of the system.

We were reminded of this by the call of one of our constant readers who was about visiting the sea shore, and who wanted the Parss continued to him to prevent a mental relapse, as well as for an internal tonic, to co-operate with the external bracing effects of salt-water bathing. The DAILY PRESS will be mailed (for the isual consideration) to all the fashionable watering-places (none of our readers visit any other) by leaving directions at our counting-room.

The Thunderer on Garibaldi and His Success.
The London Times, of the 2d inst., observes The news of the success of the Sicilian in urrection having been confirmed, we are led o wonder both at the prodigies which have seen achieved by a few Piedmontese voluntoers indifferently equipped, and the impudence of the Neapolitan Government in dis torting facts and claiming for the most dis-graceful defeats all the honors of victory. The achievements of Garibaldi have been certainly unexampled. In this case undisci-plined levies have not only resisted regular troops, but have driven them on two separate occasions from their positions. In the affair of Calata Fimi, represented by the Nea-politans as a victory, it is now known that Marshal Landi lost several hundred men and Marshal Landi lost several nundred men and a gun.

We firmly believe that no ministerial juggle at Naples will better the position of the doomed sovereign who now rules. The resignation of one batch of politicians and the instalment of another is too old a trick to have any effect on people who have suffered so long as the Scicilians. The conversion to liberalism, at the eleventh hour, of such a monarch as King Francis is not likely to impose on either his subjects or foreign states. It is plain that the King, who has deluded himself or has been deluded by others up to this time, now feels that Sicily is lost unless he comes to terms, or affects to concur in the wishes of his subjects. To dismiss his ministry, to put a curb for a time on the miscreants who direct his police, and to publish conciliatory proclamations in the sland, is just what the never-failing Bourbon quality would suggest. The repentance comes too late. Though we do not advise armed intervention in favor of Garibaldi, yet we trust that there will be no attempt in any quarter to rescue the wretched King from the consequences of his own tyranny. That his subjects will listen to no expressions of penitence we fully believe, and if King and people be left to themselves, matters will soon be settled.

Explanation of Ten Brocck's Winnings of $86.000 at the Derby.

The report which we published of the great race for the Derby seems to puzzle not a little such of our readers as are not familiar with the operations of the turf. It was stated that, though Mr. Ten Brocck had lost every dollar that he had invested on "Umpire," whom he had backed to win some $400,000 he yet won $60,000 on the race. Our readers, innocent on betting operations, cannot understand how he could have lost so much, and yet been such a heavy winner at the same time. Horses entered for the Derby rarely get a place in the betting until the public have had an opportunity of judging of their merits through their performances as two-year olds. Thus some horses will begin at one hundred to one against them months before the race, and yet when the day of the race comes around, public opinion may have so changed with regard to their merit that they may be out of the betting altogether, or as low as five to one. Thus, "Umpire" started at one hundred to one; yet after his Stockton performances he came down to seven to one, and finally stood at four to one, which was his price, we believe, at starting.

Now, suppose Mr. Ten Brocck to have backed his horse at one hundred to one to four to one, which was his price, we believe, at starting.

Now. suppose Mr. Ten Brocck to have backed his horse at one hundred to one to win, say $300,000, he had then just $3,000 invested on him. But there was no necessity of his risking this, even, when he might make money whether his horse won or lost, so he very prudently "hedged" his bets—that is, he turned in and bet against "Umpire"—the morality of the turf being such that it is considered quite fair to oppose and support the same horse for the same evenfl Supposing, then, that when his horse was at five to one, he bet $100,000 against him, he would, if "Umpire" succeeded, have won $300,000 and lost $100,000, leaving him $200,000 clear gain; while if he lost, he would have won $20,000 and lost $3,000, leaving him yet $17,000 altead of the race. This is what is termed hedging, and as thirty horses ran for the Derby, and the same system might be pursued with any of them, it will not be difficult to understand how, though "Umpire" lost the Derby, his owner is yet a heavy winner in the race.
